PROMISE & PRACTICE · UNIT 3 · CHAPTER 7 ASSIGNMENT

Match the Muckraker

Matching + argument · Skill: Can journalism change the law?

Name _____ Period _____ Date _____

WHAT I CAN DO TODAY

I can connect what muckrakers exposed to the reforms that followed and judge how much journalism mattered.

"The Beef Trust — Don't shoot, I'll come down" — cartoon, c. 1902, public domain (Library of Congress)

Directions

Match each exposé to the change that followed it. Then decide which one did the most to change the law.

1 Match the exposé to the change

Choose the change that followed each exposé.

A. Meat Inspection Act and Pure Food and Drug Act (1906)
B. The Supreme Court breaks up Standard Oil (1911) C. New York Tenement House Act (1901)
D. Keating-Owen Child Labor Act (1916) E. 17th Amendment: voters elect senators directly (1913)

1	Upton Sinclair, The Jungle (1906) — Chicago meatpacking	_____
2	Ida Tarbell, The History of the Standard Oil Company (1904)	_____
3	Jacob Riis, How the Other Half Lives (1890) — tenement life	_____
4	Lewis Hine, photographs of child workers (1908–1916)	_____

Pick the match you think shows journalism's power best.

Which one, and why?

What else besides the writing helped the law pass?

3 A muckraker today

If you were a muckraker today, what problem would you expose?

Name the problem and who it hurts.

Finished? Turn in this paper the way your teacher asks.
